

THE TIMELINE OF A PERSONAL INJURY CASE.

The crash/Incident+Injury:

This must occur first for a claim to result. Like a car crash, slip and fall, etc...

Medical Treatment:

Getting medical treatment in a reasonable time post the incident is extremely important. If you wait too long you will have to prove that the medical care you sought and received was truly related to the incident. It is best if you receive medical treatment the day of the incident.

Investigate & Secure Evidence:

Often, investigation of the facts, the scene and preservation of evidence can be crucial to winning your case. This is another piece where having an experienced attorney can be your best asset.

Gather all medical records and evidence to prepare for a presentation to the insurance company:

We will be gathering your medical records and bills. When your medical care ends, then a final request for your medications can be made, and your injury file can be completed for review and preparation of the settlement to be sent to the insurance companies.

Hire an attorney:

There is no time frame required for this, but keep in mind, dealing with insurance companies is neither easy nor pleasant. Everything you say can be twisted and turned against you.

Track medical care & client recovery:

If you need treatment, therapy or MRI's. A good attorney will stay in touch, track your medical care and make recommendations based upon the attorney's experience.

Submit the claim for settlement:

In conjunction with the attorney's review and discussion with you, a value range for your case will be
